

FICTIONAL SAMPLE

Your three-card Tarot reading

Alex Morgan · invented birth details

Selected pages from a fictional report. A complete reading can contain more pages.

1. Your situation · The Star

Notice what helps you recover a realistic sense of possibility. Small acts of care connect inspiration with everyday life.

Hope becomes practical through something small you can do or receive today.

Here the card helps you name the central issue. Compare the image with what is actually happening, rather than using it as a label for yourself.

What to watch for: You do not need to feel optimistic all the time to move forward.

Upright

A question to consider: Where does “Quiet hope” connect with something I can actually observe?

3. A possible next step · The Sun

Recognise progress and put it into clear words. Enjoying a result can sit alongside attention to unfinished details.

A good result deserves recognition. Name what worked so that you can use the lesson again.

Here the card offers a way to think about your next action. Choose a step that is safe, manageable and within your responsibility.

What to watch for: Enjoyment can coexist with a realistic look at unfinished work.

Upright

A question to consider: Where does “Seeing what works” connect with something I can actually observe?

Reading the cards together

The reading moves from “Quiet hope”, through “Clarifying uncertainty”, towards “Seeing what works”. Ask where this sequence matches your actual question. If it does not fit, keep the question and leave the interpretation aside.

A question to consider: What small step is within my control?
